GREENSBORO TELEGRAM.

VOL. VIII. NO. 22. GREENSBORO, N. C., FRIDAY, MARCH 1, 1901. Price Five Cents.

News from High Point.

High Point, Feb. 28.—A series of meetings are in progress at Green Street Baptist Church, conducted by the pastor, Rev. J. M. Hilliard, assisted by Rev. Henry Sheets, of Lexington.

At an adjourned meeting of the Board of Aldermen this week it was decided to let Mr. Knox, the hydraulic engineer, continue the survey for water works.

This is examination week at the graded school, and the boys and girls are hard at work on the problems that confront them.

Messrs. Wm A. and Clifton Ring returned last night from Winston, where they attended the funeral of their mother.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred G. Barbee have returned from their bridal tour South, and at present are domiciled at the home of her her mother, Mrs. E. A. Snow.

Dave Fogleman Stabbed.

This morning about 3 o'clock Squire Pritchett, who lives in South Greensboro, was aroused by some one shaking his blinds, and inquiring what was wanted, he was answered by a man who said that his name was Fogleman, and that he wanted the squire to come down street and issue a warrant for two men—Coble and Hart by name—who had stabbed his brother, Dave Fogleman, the afternoon before. He said that his brother was so badly hurt that he would not be alive when he returned The squire told him to wait until daylight and he would issue the warrant. This was done and Deputy Sheriff Weatherly went down to bring in the men.

The occurrence took place near Tabernacle Church, about six miles southeast of the city. The three men, it seems, had been hunting, and returned by way of a still house, and probably there imbibing freely of the ardent, became quarrelsome with the result that Fogleman was stabbed in the back and side.

Captain and Pilot Condemned.

San Francisco, Feb. 27.—After hearing testimony from Pilot Jordan, Graham Coghland and other officers of the steamer Rio de Janerio, the Coroner's jury this evening returned a verdict declaring that the deaths of 131 people were "caused by criminal negligence on the part of both Capt. Ward and Pilot Jordan, and we most strenuously censure the Pacific Mail Steamship Company for employing incompetent Chinese crews for saving human lives."

The verdict is considered absurd in the light of the testimony, which showed that the Chinese obeyed orders and launched the boats as rapidly as possible. The testimony of Second Officer Graham Coghlan, son of Capt. Coghlan of the Raleigh, proved very clearly that the pilot was responsible for coming into the harbor in the thick fog.

Coghlan was very emphatic in his assertions that the Chinese crew betrayed no sign of cowardice. He declared that the whole fault lay in trying to steam into the harbor in a fog so thick that no lights could be seen and the only guide was the fog sirens each side of the Golden Gate.

Kidnappers Offer $20,000.

Omaha, Neb., Feb. 27.—The Cudahy kidnappers, it is currently reported, have made a direct offer to Edward Cudahy to return $20,000 of the ransom he paid for the return of his son, provided he will call off the Pinkertons engaged on the case and stop the prosecution. Cudahy and Chief Donahue refuse to deny or affirm the report.

Squire Wolfe's First Trial.

'Squire Wolfe hadn't more than got settled in his new office in the Federal building than he was called on to try a big dog suit in which there was so much wood work that his sergeant-at-arms, Policeman Whittington, could scarcely maintain order. The participants were Dr. Broadnox, Dr. Burbanks and Mr. W. J. Chandler. Dr. Broadnox was the plaintiff, Mr. Chandler the defendant, Dr. Burbanks and the dog was the bone of contention. The words flew across the table thick and furious for a while and completely knocked the bottom out of the dignity of the court. Till finally, the 'Squire could not stand it any longer and compelled silence.

The dog had belonged to Dr. Burbanks. He had made some kind of promise to Mr. Chandler regarding it. During Mr. Chandler's absence Dr. Burbanks gave the dog to Dr. Broadnox. Mr. Chandler saw the dog on the street and took him. Dr. Broadnax tok out claim and delivery papers for the dog and brought the case before 'Squire Wolfe. Mr. C. G. Wright appeared as the attorney for Mr. Chandler, and made a speech which the judge complimented very much. Mr. Chandler said that Dr. Burbank had promised him the refusal of the dog if he ever sold him. Dr. Burbank said he had not sold the dog to Dr. Broadnax, but had given it to him.

'Squire Wolfe said as he was to decide only as to where the title to the dog lay, he guessed he'd have to give it to Dr. Broadnax. After this there was more talk. Dr. Broadnax said Mr. Chandler owed him anyhow. Mr. Chandler said if he did he would pay it, and whipped out the money. He also paid the cost of the suit, cash down, except Officer Whittington's part, which the latter forgave.

Quick Work.

Mr J. L. King, of the Durham Herald, came over yesterday to put up the Telegram's linotype machine. By eleven o'clock he had it up and ready to operate, and if the workman who was connecting the power had been ready, some of the machine composition might have gone in yesterday afternoon's paper. Mr King is a man of parts. He can set up and operate a linotype, and "without changing his clothes," write a column of snappy editorial paragraphs which the papers copy right and left. Indeed, he is recognized as the brightest paragrapher in the State The Telegram is greatly indebted to Mr King, who left his own business and came over to put its machine on its feet.

Waitress Bride Deserted.

New York Sun.

A bridegroom who left his wife in the lurch in a Broadway hotel and the bride who declined to finish out her honeymoon alone in a lodging house were both put on the missing list last night. They are Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gardiner, of Montreal. The bride was Miss Orth, waitress in a quick-lunch restaurant there until a week ago, when she was married to Gardiner. He had been one of the customers and had confided to her across the wheat cake bar that he was a rich New York banker and that he loved her.

The Frank Gardiners reached this city last Monday and went to the Delavan, Tom O'Rourke's hotel, at Broadway and Fortieth street. The bridegroom went out at 10 o'clock in the morning after telling his wife that he was going to consolidate a bunch of railroads and would be back in an hour or two. The bride has not seen him since.

Landlord O'Rourke got nervous about the case yesterday afternoon and sent the bride to the Superintendent of Outdoor Poor with a request that he furnish her with a ticket back to Montreal. Superintendent Blair told her that she could not get a ticket until today and that she would have to stay over night in a lodging house. The bride was indignant and ran out of Mr. Blair's office. She hasn't been seen since. Her trunk is still at the Grand Central station.

Ernest Boon, aged 11 years, died at the home of his parents on South Davie yesterday afternoon.

Mr. McClamroch and Bride.

Mr. J. R. McClamroch and bride passed through the city last night on their way to the home of the groom's father, near Mocksville, going by way of Charlotte. The couple were married in Newport News Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock, and their popularity was testified to by the many valuable present with which they were remembered. They will return to Greensboro about the middle of March and for the present will board with Mrs. Hardin on Pearson street. Mr McClamroch is a member of the firm of McClamroch Bros. of this city.

Miss Stockard Here.

Miss Sallie W. Stockard, who expects to issue her history of Guilford in the fall, is in the city. She has recently called on Mrs. C. H Wiley at Winston, who kindly loaned her Dr Wiley's scrap book. She has also just seen Mrs Stonewall Jackson and "Christian Reid." Miss Stockard has already sold more than one hundred of her book, "The Lilly of the Valleys," which has not yet been issued

Kansas City Live Stock Men Will Exhibit a Huge Steer at the St. Louis Exposition.

Mammoth, the huge steer now at the Kansas City stock yards, is to be a prominent figure at the word's fair to be held in St. Louis in 1903, says the Kansas City Times. Of course, Mammoth would be a prominent figure anywhere. He is seven feet one inch in height, measures nine feet in length and weighs about 3,000 pounds. And Mammoth is but a baby, being only two years of age. The baby is a fine, healthy product, however, and in three years he is expected to weigh at least 6,000. That is, he will if the doctor takes good care of his health, and Mammoth is to have a special physician—a veterinary, of course. Then he will have several acres on which to graze all by himself, and that combination should help him some.

L. A. Allen, a prominent live stock commission man at the stock yards, is responsible for the agitation concerning this elephantine brute. Mr. Allen proposes to introduce a unique feature at the fair. His scheme is to purchase Mammoth and to place him on exhibition alongside of the smallest steer bred in the original Louisiana tract. The two steers will thus represent the growth and development of the Louisiana purchase since the time of Jefferson. The small steer will be emblematic of the territory as it was when Napoleon disposed of it in 1803. The large animal will represent the wonderful strides of the nineteenth century.

Both animals are fitting representatives of the Louisiana territory, as both were bred there. The smaller of the two, who might kick at being shown up as a back number if he had any say as to the cast of the allegory, is scarcely four feet high. He is a cousin of the famous Wing, that weighed over 4,000 pounds at eight years of age. An organized movement is already on foot for this display three years from now. Mr. Allen stated to a reporter for the Times that a syndicate would be formed to buy the mammoth steer. The capital stock of the company will be $2,000, each share valued at $100. A number of stockmen have already signified their willingness to take an interest in the affair.

All the plans have not yet been perfected, but after the ground where the animal will graze has been purchased, a comfortable shed will be built, and a keeper and veterinary surgeon engaged. Mammoth's partner will be selected from among the small steers that still exist in the state of Louisiana, the same breed that was there when Jefferson purchased the territory. Mammoth himself is said to have been developed from the same type. L. Levy, a wanderer from Palestine, is said to have been the first to cultivate the big branch from which Mammoth came. The animal was raised by A. A. Crandall, of Little River, Kan.

Lawless New Mexico.

A good deal of lawlessness is prevalent in New Mexico. In many of the towns the faro, roulette and other gambling houses are wide open, and the authorities seem to regard them as matters of necessity. Shooting brawls are of common occurrence.

MAY BE MADE FOUR YEARS.

Growing Sentiment in Congress to Lengthen the Term of Service of House Members.

There is a growing sentiment in congress in favor of making the terms of the members of the house four years, instead of two as at present. It is contended by many members of the house, who claim to be disinterested, better legislation would be the result from such a change. The house would be more deliberate in its action, the members would be more likely to vote their convictions, and not depend upon the senate to amend much unwise legislation which is pushed through the house in response to the demand of public sentiment.

In discussing this subject, a western member said: "I have seen members tremble in their boots when called upon to vote upon a question pending in the house. Frequently, in deference to public opinion, they were forced to vote against their convictions. The members knew that if they did not bow to the public will they would be turned down at the polls at the next election.

"If a member had four years to serve he would have time enough to justify himself with his constituents, as the wisdom of his action would become apparent. Frequently members vote against their convictions for no other reason than that they do not have time to 'square' themselves with their constituents."

DISCUSSION OF THE FAYETTEVILLE DISPENSARY

The Senate Had a Lively Time of it Over the Bill to Repeal, Which Was Carried—Will the House Pass It?

Raleigh Post.

S. B. 946, to repeal the law of 1897 establishing liquor dispensary system in Cumberland county, was taken up at 12:30, the hour set for its consideration, the bill being on its second reading, with an unfavorable report (11 to 10) from the committee.

The discussion of Wednesday was resumed, Senator McIntyre, of Robeson, being recognized. He opposed the bill, chiefly on the ground that, according to his claim, that the re-establishment of the saloon method of selling liquor at Fayetteville was opposed by citizens of Red Springs and other portions of his (Robeson) county. He read petitions from a number of these protestants, and stated that under the saloon system liquor could be more easily bought and imported into Robeson (where prohibition prevails), especially via railroad transportation, the territory in question being brought close to Fayetteville by railroad connection, etc.

He said that prohibition had operated to the advantage of Robeson county in every way, and that the county had increased in population at a greater rate than any county in that section not having the liquor prohibition law.

Senator Morton—I am requested by Representative Gaither to state that the commissioners of Cumberland had not in the past (except in one case, which was afterwards canceled) and would not in the future license saloons outside the corporate limits of Fayetteville; and that he (Gaither) had just introduced a bill in the house to make it unlawful of them to do so.

Mr. McIntyre, continuing, claimed that crime in Cumberland county had decreased under the dispensary system, and read a list of the number of indictments during the year in question, to bear out his assertions, adding that the decrease amounted to 40 per cent. and that the school fund had received $2,000 more under the dispensary than under the license system.

Read a communication from Chief of Police W. H. Flowers, of Fayetteville, who said he did not have one-half the number of drunk and disorderly cases to contend with now as he had under the license system.

Senator McNiell—Chief Flowers stated to me that he signed that communication (which was prepared and written out by another and handed to him) mechanically and without reading it over, and he (Flowers) voted to abolish the dispensary at the primary at the election last week.

The latter part of the above statement was denied by a gentleman present, Mr. McKethan (through Senator McIntyre), who stated that he was sure Flowers had voted to retain the dispensary.

As to the primary recently held, Mr. McIntyre said that he would venture to say that the men who called this primary would not be willing to pass a law legalizing primaries in North Carolina to control future operations; he didn't know positively about that, however.

If this bill meant the abolition of the liquor selling business, he would vote for it. But it doesn't mean that—it means a very different thing, the open saloon (which he condemned in strong terms) and the establishment of liquor headquarters at Fayetteville for all that surrounding country, and not Cumberland county alone.

If you pass this bill you will make a great mistake. Is this Senate going to put itself on record as favoring the open saloon? Many good mothers in Cumberland and adjacent territory are praying that you will not reestablish the barrooms near their homes to ruin the boys so dear to their hearts!

SENATOR WARD'S SPEECH.

No man could say that he was opposed to any moral question which he was convinced would be beneficial to the people of the State.

He attacked Mr. McIntyre for saying that the paper he held (alleging to be signed by Chief of Police Flowers, whose signature was not even certified to) "would still hold good" after the Senator from Cumberland that the man himself had told the Senator he signed it mechanically and without reading.

At this juncture Senator McNeill handed Senator Ward the sworn affidavit of pollholders at precinct No. 3, at which Flowers voted, stating that they, the pollholders saw and deposited the ballot of Flowers, and that said ballot was against the dispensary, and Senator Ward read it.)

But I need no affidvit to convince me that your statement, sir, was truthful and correct. I was sure of it, and am sure of it on your word alone.

Mr. Ward then defended the primary held in Cumberland county and said the will of the white people of that county as so expressed, should be conclusive with this Senate. The

CRUSHED TO DEATH UNDER WHEELS.

Burlington Messenger.

About half past five o'clock last evening John Tate, a young white man nineteen years of age, who for the past few months has been boarding with the family of L. R. Hacket, near Plaid Mills, met with a horrible accident by being crushed beneath the wheels of a fast moving freight train.

The young man has been employed in the Elmira mills for the past few months and was preparing to take a trip to Greensboro on a freight train last evening. The local freight took the siding to allow the through train to pass, and it was the third section of No. 73, running about 25 miles an hour, that young Tate attempted to mount.

Just a few minutes before the sad accident occurred Bob Hackett warned the boy of his imminent danger, and urged him to return home. Not heeding this good advice he joined two boys from Gibsonville and walked a few steps from the track to await the next train.

Mr. Hackett did not remonstrate with the boys but returned home thinking that Tate would meet with his usual good fortune in such dangerous escapades.

The train came thundering along and the three boys made ready to "swing the rods," as they had done on previous occasions. One of the boys from Gibsonville was thrown with considerable force against a "clear post," and narrowly escaped being struck on the head by the rapidly passing cars. The second boy did not touch the train, but Tate grasped the rod presumably with one hand, and was thrown beneath the car. His right leg was caught at the ankle joint and completely crushed and mangled to the knee. The bones were broken into fragments and scattered about the scene of the disaster. The young men who were with Tate took fright and ran in the direction of Gibsonville, but they retained presence of mind sufficient to hail Dr. Freeman, who was seen driving past.

The doctor hastened to the boy and placed a ligament around the wounded member to stop the flow of blood. Dr. Faucette was hastily summoned and the boy was then removed to the home of Mr. Hackett. Drs. Page and Patterson were called in consultation, and every known method of creating reaction was employed. During this time and even until his death which occurred nearly nine hors later, the boy did not suffer any pain. He was perfectly conscious until the end came, and his last words were: "Hackett, I am going. Going home to die no more."

Charlotte Observer.

Few men understand the negro character better than Rev. Dr. John W. Stagg, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church of this city. He knows the good, the bad and the humorous in the negro, and he is epual to Polk Miller in his acquaintance with the little trickery and cunning that the colored race occassionally uses to deceive. Yet, with all the innocence and crudulity of a resident of Boston, he has fallen a victim to the wiles of his washerwoman.

Her name is Laura Johnson, and for a year or more she washed clothes for the family of Dr. Stagg and for others in his neighborhood. She is a samll, quite black lady who dresses up on Sunday and sings a high soprano in the Baptist church. In week days she is meek and creates the impression that she is deserving.

Laura bought furniture on the installment plan—at least she said as much. About the first of the year she announced that the receipts for washing were not sufficient to square the weekly sums due on furniture. She told her tale of woe to Henry Jenkins, the colored butler and general utility man at Dr. Stagg's house, and Henry was sympathetic and concerned about the matter. He went to Dr. Stagg and said:

"I'se er nigger inside and outside and I know er good nigger when I sees her. I know Laura for two years and she is an hones' woman." He added that he wanted the doctor to endorse her note for $30 and that he was sure the doctor would be safe in the lending of his name to the singer.

And Dr. Stagg loaned his name. The note was dated January 17th, 1901, was for $30 and on to this day may be seen: "We promise to pay 30 days after date" and then, "Laura Johnson, her mark," and "John W. Stagg." The note was handled by an accommodating company, which does a private banking business and charges a beautiful, ascending rate of interest. It fell due yesterday, but Miss Johnson fell into the ways of the transgressors and vamoused. So Dr. Stagg waited while some one with a head for figures lassoed the compound interest and added it to the $30 Then he paid both; and now keeps the note as evidence of chirogaphy and experience.

Jenkins, the butler, rises often to apologize and remark that he miscalculated. Ever more will he be skeptical of dark-skinned sirens who sing melodies in high falsetto key. "She fooled me," he says; "dat bad little nigger—she fooled me."

The police want Laura, but they have not located her yet. It is said that she has gone to Greenville, S. C., and if there is a colored Baptist church in that city she wil soon be found trilling a jubilation from the choir loft. Then she wil be brought here to face the mayor and Dr. Stagg and Henry Jenkins.

FRIDAY, MARCH 1.

An unknown friend sends The Telegram from Boston an issue of the Boston Herald of February 21st, in which a correspondent devotes a column and a half to the abuse of North Carolina. In it he characterizes the treatment of the negro in this State as a crim against humanity, his specific charge being that the Legislature was now trying to deprive the negro of the privilege of practicing law. Such fool propositions as this bill, which stood for nothing but the post campaign effervesence of a country politician, serve as ample pretexts for fool articles like that in The Herald. The South, thank the Lord, has reached that point when it no longer takes seriously any of New England's diatribes. And we expect to live, D.V., to see New England so busy looking after her industrial supremacy that she will be unable to devote much time to the exploitation of her views regarding the South's social and political customs. Of course this self appointed mentor pays no attention to the treatment accorded the negro in the North when he gets off the following:

As the Roman senator I have quoted urges, all laws "should be the same to those who are citizens of the same state" All, under the expansive influence of a republic should share alike the equal privileges of free government; should at least be entitled and free to earn an honest living or receive a needed service in any profession, open to all classes, colors, races or nationality beneath the protecting folds of our flag.

And let no man be deceived by lying pretences, or misled by false prejudic The hand that held the Confederate musket holds this Democratic bludgeon; it or its successor. Unless a halt is called in tones which must needs be heeded, the purpose which failed in '61 will be accomplished now.

Negrophobia—a sentiment belittling to the proud Caucasian—is fast taking deep root in our political sentiment It is a noxious and poisonous growth

It has no natural place in the soil of free institutions. It is a weed which tends to choke the harvest of generous impulse and human sympathies, out of which havecome the sublimest achievements, the broadest patriotism the loftiest heroism and the noblest sacrifices of the human race. On the arrogant assumption of inequality in human rights, that cruel affectation of contempt for supposed inferiors has been based and justified every wicked despotism in the history of the world.

This malign and dangerous spirit of caste, vulgar when rooted in wealth, contemptible when founded on birth, mean and cowardly if fortified by artificial barriers, has no abiding place we should recognize or sanction in this western hemisphere. It ought rather to be rooted up from our soil consecrated to freedom, and withered in the hot breath of our patriotic hate for every form of tyranny. Let us not suffer it, even by our lazy or idle indifference, to distil its poisonous virus throughout our social life.

There is no need to pay attention to these ravings. The country is beginning to learn that the Southern white man is the negro's friend, and the men who talk as the above are more and more discounted. As an evidence that the Southern people are the black man's friend, we call attento the liberal treatment now being accorded the negro in North Carolina.

An exchange says: "Admiral Sampson spoke in the highest terms of his efficiency and character, but he hoped the Secretary of the Navy would not appoint to the line officers who had worked their way up in the navy, as they had not the blood and breeding necessary in an officer."

We have no doubt that Admiral Sampson never said that. While we have never seen exactly what he did say, we have no doubt that this version of it is garbled.

The concert tonight is for the benefit of the organ fund of West Market Street Church.

IMPROVEMENT OE CAPE FEAR RIVER.

News and Oserver.

Washington, February 28.—Senator Pritchard's amendment to the River and Harbor Bill giving two hundred and fifty thousand dollarsin obtaining a navigable channel from Wilmington to Fayetteville was adopted by the Senate today. The fight will be to hold it in the House, to which he is bending every effort, and the outlook favors a great development for the Cape Fear section.

The channel is to be eight feet deep.

This action of the Senate means much for the southeastern section of North Carolina and will add materially to the value of the lands along the Cape Fear in that a market will be given to a wide scope of territory that includes much fertile land.

The matter has been in obeyance for some time, and different parties from this section of the State have been in Washington to secure the passage of this act. A delegation of citizens, appointed by the Fayetteville Chamber of Commerce was here very recently in its behalf, and to their efforts and the similiar efforts on the part of other citizens of the southeastern section of North Carolina is the passage of the amendment largely due.

The passage of the act reducing war tax on tobacco is also gratifying to North Carolina. Col. John S. Cunningham, the largest tobacco raiser in the work is here, and is well pleased with the passage of the act. He has been here several times in behalf of the farmer while the matter was before the committee, and worked effectively for the repeal of the act

It was stated tonight that as soon as the Army Approprop iation Bill with the Philippine amendment, giving the President full military and civil powers becomes a law, he will appoint Representative Linney to a judgeship in Manila. The place will pay $5,000.

There is a story in North Carolina circles today that ex-Congressman Harry Skinner will succeed Bernard as district attorney for the eastern distric.

It is said Pritchard has promised him the place.

A Busy Town.

Charlotte Observer.

"Business is dull in every town in North Carolina that I have visited, except High Point," said a traveling man who came to the city last night. "Business men of all kinds and everywhere are complaining, but at High Point everybody is hustling and doing well. It is a most remarkable town, and is destined to be one of the biggest manufacturing centres in the South. If anybody wants an object lesson as to the value of diversified industries, he only needs to visit that wide-awake place."

Woman Crank After McKinley.

New York Sun.

A nicely dressed, middle-aged woman asked Magistrate Mott in the Yorkville police court yesterday to help her to prevent the inauguration of President McKinley next Monday. She had drawn a petition, she said, and had forwarded it, with 500 letters, to Washington, but she wasn't hopeful that that would do. When the magistrate told her that he could not help her she said that she had expected it.

"I just wanted to get you on record, that's all," said the woman to the magistrate as she stepped from the bridge. She refused to tell her name, but said that she had been a school teacher in Boston.

Among other things she said that Spanish spies inspected the country and that Magistrate Mott was in league with them, but she had her eye on them all.

DISCUSSION OF FAYETTVILLE DISPENSARY.

same kicking aginst the "regularity" of the recent Simmons-Carr Senatorial primary was made, and yet we elected Mr. Simmons the nominee without question.

If you gentlemen, who plead for prohibition and descant against the sale of liquor, why don't you pass this bill and then have a local option election held in Fayetteville or Cumberland county and wipe out the curse—and I will help you to do it!

No, the trouble with you gentlemen is that you are willing to have liquor sold, but it must be sold your way, and your way only!

As to the importation of whiskey from Fayetteville into Robeson county, why the dispensary sells all its liquor in bottles and jugs. Why can't dispensary liquor be shipped into that county as easy as saloon liquor? None, and it is so shipped.

The only difference between a saloon and a dispensary is that in the first you buy a drink and in the latter you buy a drunk!

I will vote to wipe out the liquor traffic of Fayetteville or any town or county where the majority of the white people desire it. But I will not cast my vote to license my State to engage in a business that I would not engage in myself. He condemned the dispensary, its methods and the evil results following and attending its operation in severe terms.

The sheriff of Cumberland sits behind me here, and he tells me most positively that crime has increased in that county, increased largely, since the dispensary has been in operation there—and I believe him. No one is so competent to judge of this matter as he.

As to the insinuation of the senator from the prohibition county of Robeson, (Mr. McIntyre), I say to him that when I use spirits at all I do as he does—take it from the "package" at home (where his good wife can supervise its use in moderation).

Mr. McIntyre—That is better than to take it in saloons. (Or in a dispensary," added Mr. Ward.)

He declared that he occupied no middle ground on this question, and claimed that all his votes on all these dispensary bills and questions had been consistent with the course he was now taking.

OTHER SPEECHES ON THE SUBJECT.

Senator London followed Senator Ward. He claimed that not one-third of the voters of Fayetteville town or Cumberland county had voted against the dispensary. Said the claim that a fusion Legislature forced the dispensary on the people would not hold, as a majority of the Democrats in that Legislature voted for it, few though they were; that the Democratic Legislature of 1899 declined to repeal it, but now the Senator from Cumberland and 911 white voters ask for its repeal, and we are told that we should do so on their account.

Stated that 21 of the 26 officials of the town of Fayetteville favored retention of dispensary; that the mayor and ten of the fourteen aldermen favor it.

Mr. Morton— do you think that fact should be conclusive when the people themselves are opposed to it?

I do, replied Mr. London, when there is a question about what the majority of the people want. He then continued to defend the dispensary committee and to criticise certain acts of the other side, including the Senator from Cumberland.

Senator Justice introduced a resolution providing that the bill be re-committed and that the committee be instructed to report an amendment providing for another, and a legalized primary on the dispensary question, the continuance of the dispensary to be dependent on that result.

Senator McNeill appealed to Mr. Justice to withdraw the resolution. He said that the question had already caused so much disturbance and commotion and bad feeling that it was very important to settle it, and not have all this fight to go over again—it would be disastrous to the community.

Senator Morrison opposed the recommittal of the bill. It would be a reflection on the Senator from Cumberland to refer it now—especially after the unjustinable attacks upon him and his intgrity by the Senators from Chatham nd Robeson.

He criticised Senator London for allowing men from Fayetteville to sit by his side and prompt him to assail the integrity and character of the Senator from Cumberland—who is as good a man as sits upon the floor of this Senate.

He denounced the dispensary system in strong language. He said he'd vote to abolish one anywhere—and if every man, woman and child in this country should petition him to vote for one for his county, he would not do so.

The dispensary is wrong in principle—the very idea of licensing our State or our county to engage in a business we would personally scorn to follow. Might as well set the State up to sell tobacco, calico, peanuts or any other commodity.

Mr. Morrison, though confined to the resolution of Senator Justice, spoke eloquently, as usual, and made a strong argument against dispensaries.

Senator Justice then arose and stated that in deference to Senator McNeill, and at his earnest request, he would withdraw the motion to recommit.

Senator Travis next spoke, and said that the dispensary people (who claim to be the advocates of a "high moral question") should not be allowed to come here and question the primary election, after they had refused to participate in it, having had the most ample opportunity and urgent invitations. But instead of settling the matter (and settling it their way if they had the majority—they now claim) they not only refused to take part.

The bill passed second reading by the vote of 25 to 12, after the substitute offered by Mr. Webb (abolishing the dispensary and making the county a prohibition county until next general election, when local option election could be held) had been voted down by the vote of 26 to 11.

The claim of other cough medicines to be as good as Chamberlain's are effectually set at rest in the following testimonial of Mr. C. D Glass, an employe of Bartlett & Dennis Co., Gardiner, Me. He says: 'I had kept adding to a cold and cough in the winter of 1897, trying every cough medicine I heard of without permanent help, until one day I was in the store of Mr. Houlehan and he advised me to try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and offered to pay back my money if I was not cured. A Reconsidered Decision

By Nellie Cravey Gilmore.

(From the Home Magazine, Washington. Reprinted by Special Permission.)

THERE was no doubt in Dorothy's mind that she had made a wise decision. That is, according to a pecuniary view of the thing and the smiling approval of a host of poor relations whose proclivities for advice, heretofore, were in ill proportion to the size of their purse.

And though inwardly rebellious, the idea of sacrificing herself on the altar of Mammon seemed to her as interesting as it was odd. But money could do anything! All the pinching little economies that they had been compelled to practice for years would vanish like snow under a noonday sun, and some sense of independence be established. But there is no getting over the bitter fact that other thoughts, and, perhaps, other hopes, had been crushed into the background.

"All that is past and gone, though," Dorothy told herself with a stanch sense of propriety, "and I mustn't allow myself to think too much about it."

She passed her hand, a little wearily, through the brown hair that waved back from her face, and leaned one elbow meditatively on the window sill, thinking of the future she had laid out for herself, and living over, in a hundred ways, the past.

Then she thought of Harry, and looking gloomily for an instant at the diamond that sparkled on her finger, drew it off, slowly, and with a sigh laid it on her lap. No, it had not been an engagement, exactly—but—

There was all the difference in the world now. Had he not, only the night before, after all that had passed between them, entirely ignored her and carried Adelaide Hunt, a bright, dashing brunette, to the swellest hop of the season, while she remained at home? That was all. But it was enough. So that when Col. Eggerton, as usual, called around, and, as usual, proposed, she promised, in desperation, a final answer on the morrow.

So that answer—of acceptance—was written and signed with a scrawl, and laid on the library table to be posted. In one day everything had been changed. It did not seem possible, yet as she sat by the low vine-screened window, a soft wind lazily lifting the loose hair on her forehead, each event rose up in lurid distinctness before her mind.

Then a brilliant red flamed over the girl's face, and faded off suddenly, as a tall, athletic young man came quickly up the walk. As Harry Bainbridge stepped on the low veranda, she left her seat by the window, and gave him her hand with a friendliness that ill-betokened any inward agitation.

The shining regard that broke over his face at sight of her, brought the soft color to her cheeks. She smiled—a little uneasily—and drew her hand out of his.

"Will you sit out here?" she said. "It is cool, and pleasant."

He bowed a smiling assent and sank into the empty chair next to hers.

"You did not expect me?" he queried, studying the girl's face critically. She was pretty—very pretty. A tall, slim girl, with regular features, and expressive gray eyes.

"I knew you were here, and I came," he went on. "May I tell you why? I want to ask you—to tell you how much I love you, and to ask you to marry me, if you will."

"I would rather you would not—not say such things," she returned, nervously, moving away from him.

"But I must," he continued, half smiling and trying to look into her face. "It is my first opportunity to ask you. I did not feel that I had a right to before. But now, I am in a fair position to—"

He paused for one moment to glance at her face, now turned to him, half-frightened, and with an earnestness almost pathetic.

"You must not, you must not, indeed," she choked back a little dry sob. "It has all been a mistake—a wretched mistake," she went on brokenly, her face pale with suppressed feeling.

She was staring past him, vacantly, at the wide green garden, now brilliant with a thousand perfumed blossoms, while, with hands cold and trembling, she took the ring from her lap and reaching toward him suddenly laid the glistening thing on his knee.

He looked at her in a dazed sort of way, the happy light dying out of his face as his fingers closed mechanically over the trinket.

"Why Dorothy—what's the matter? Won't you keep it?"

"I would rather not," she returned, her voice tremulous in spite of herself.

"You see"—twisting the end of her sash—"I am going to marry some one else, and—"

"Dorothy!"

He had risen and was leaning against the banister rail, where he could look her directly in the face, and where she, too, could see him. He had grown very pale, and with a deeper throb of pain than any he had yet known, waited in silence for her to say something, but she did not, and he went on, never taking his eyes from her face.

"I came here to ask you to be my wife, feeling and believing that you would give me the right to think of and love you—always. Was I wrong?" he continued, his breath coming quick and dry, "after all that has passed between us—to hope?"

The girl looked up for an instant, but the stern gleam that shot from her companion's eyes caused her to turn away. Suddenly the thing that she had done rose, gigantic, before her, black with a thousand nameless doubts. She almost faltered; only a strong sense of propriety withheld her, and a sting of memory of the night before sufficed to strengthen her resolution.

"Could you not easily console yourself with Miss Hunt? You seem to admire her very much." She spoke with some bitterness and her face hardened. The girl's heart was making its protest, unconsciously, but surely.

An expression, half of amusement, came into Bainbridge's face, as he caught the strange light in her eyes, but he made no answer, and, in spite of the girl's indifferent shrug, a look of annoyance crossed her face.

A breath of wind, heavy with the fragrance of summer, fluttered the ribbons of her soft gown, as she turned to him, her eyes black with sudden emotion.

"You took her to the hop—did you not?"

"It was by the merest chance," he answered with a gesture that seemed to indicate: "What else was I to do?"

There was silence for a little. Then he looked up suddenly, and said:

"I was surprised not to see you there."

Dorothy said nothing, but shaded her eyes from the sun with one small hand and gazed idly at a climbing rose at the other end of the veranda.

He had not asked her to go, and a sort of silly pride forbade her to let him know that no one else had.

"I meant to come here," Bainbridge began, after a pause, "to tell you—everything. I thought perhaps," he went on slowly, "that you would not mind—so much. But I heard—some one told me, that you would be at the dance with Eggerton. That is the reason."

The girl's heart began to beat, and a look of surprise swept the latest resentment from her face.

But the die was cast, and there was no going back now. She caught her breath, and the wave of tenderness that overwhelmed her for a minute was quickly crushed down.

Dorothy drew a deep breath. There was a pause. Presently she spoke.

"No one asked me to go to the hop," she said, determined to let him know everything now. "'I knew you were there with her, and I thought, of course, you didn't care about me."

Her heart was throbbing painfully, as she went on, unsteadily: "And now since I am going to marry some one else I don't see the use of talking any more about it."

The careless tone made her heart sink. She could not let him go like that.

"Harry!"

He turned back.

"Can't we be friends?"

"No, I think not."

"Do you mean," she asked, locking her hands tightly over each other, while a look of hurt surprise appeared on her face, "that we are to be strangers?"

"I mean," he answered, slowly, in a voice in which pain mingled with passion, "that it will be everything, or—nothing. I shall always love you, and I cannot pretend to a friendship which I do not feel."

He paused for an instant and looked straight into the girl's eyes. "It is better," he said, calmly, "to be an enemy than a hypocrite."

Something in his voice awed her into silence. The sun had begun to set and great patches of gold fell on the man's face, now white and determined—a face that brooked no compromise.

Suddenly he came close to her and, stopping, pressed his lips to her white forehead.

"It is for the last time," he said, tremulously, and was gone.

There were tears in the girl's eyes—the white lids quivered, and her lips trembled. Broken down by the violence of her emotions, she turned and hurried into the room, to be alone with her misery.

In a sort of desperation she threw a glance toward the table.

The letter! It had not been posted! Her breath came in quick, sharp gasps.

In the moment that followed, she realized everything and did not hesitate.

The next instant she was back on the veranda, a deeper color in her cheeks, and a radiant light in her eyes.

"Harry!" Dorothy's voice was clear and firm, and there was a new thrill in it.

He turned, a little coldly, and looked back inquiringly.

"You have forgotten something."

He paused for a second, then, under the potent spell of her voice, retraced his steps and followed her into the library.

She went straight up to the table and indicated by a gesture the blue tinted envelope lying there, while the soft color stole into her cheeks.

"Harry!—"

She placed one hand tremulously on his arm, and the eyes lifted to his were full of meaning—

"I might tear it up, you know."

NOT HEREDITARY

In the main, consumption is not hereditary; it is infectious. People are too afraid of heredity; better not think of the subject at all. Infection occurs continually.

Low vital force is hereditary; which gives consumption its chance. And infection plants it.

Between the two, the crop is a big one: about one-sixth of the human race, so far as is known.

We suppose it needn't be 5 per cent, if people would take fair care and Scott's emulsion of cod-liver oil.

The care saves life in all ways; the emulsion is specially aimed at the lungs, beside its general food-effect.

We'll send you a little to try, if you like.
SCOTT & BOWNE, 409 Pearl street, New York

A new remedy for billiousness is now on sale at C. E. Holton's drug store. It is called Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. It gives quick relief and will prevent the attack if given as soon as the first indication of the disease appears. Price, 25 cents per box. Samples free.

BAD BLOOD, BAD COMPLEXION.

The skin is the seat of an almost endless variety of diseases. They are known by various names, but are all due to the same cause, acid and other poisons in the blood that irritate and interfere with the proper action of the skin.

To have a smooth, soft skin, free from all eruptions, the blood must be kept pure and healthy. The many preparations of arsenic and potash and the large number of face powders and lotions generally used in this class of diseases cover up for a short time, but cannot remove permanently the ugly blotches and the red, disfiguring pimples.

Eternal vigilance is the price of a beautiful complexion when such remedies are relied on.

Mr. H. T. Shobe, 2704 Lucas Avenue, St. Louis, Mo., says: "My daughter was afflicted for years with a disfiguring eruption on her face, which resisted all treatment. She was taken to two celebrated health springs, but received no benefit. Many medicines were prescribed, but without result, until we decided to try S. S. S., and by the time the first bottle was finished the eruption began to disappear. A dozen bottles cured her completely and left her skin perfectly smooth. She is now seventeen years old, and not a sign of the embarrassing disease has ever returned."

S. S. S. is a positive, unfailing cure for the worst forms of skin troubles. It is the greatest of all blood purifiers, and the only one guaranteed purely vegetable.

Bad blood makes bad complexions.

SSS purifies and invigorates the old and makes new, rich blood that nourishes the body and keeps the skin active and healthy and in proper condition to perform its part towards carrying off the impurities from the body.

If you have Eczema, Tetter, Acne, Salt Rheum, Psoriasis, or your skin is rough and pimply, send for our book on Blood and Skin Diseases and write our physicians about your case. No charge whatever for this service.

ROBBED THE GRAVE.

A startling incident, of which Mr John Oliver, of Philadeldhia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows; 'I was in a most dreadful condition tion. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides; no appetite—gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately, a friend advised trying Electric Bitters: and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks and am now a well man. I know they saved my life, and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50 cents per bottle at C. E. Holton's drug store.

Counterfeits of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve are liable to cause blood poisoning. Leave them alone. The original has the name of DeWitt's upon the box and wrapper. It is bramless and healing salve for skin diseases. Unequalled for piles. Howard Gardner.
